I started using online social network about 11 years ago, in my 7th grade. The first account I ever created on social media was on Facebook. I have used so many different social network services such as WhatsApp to communicate with friends, Instagram to share media with the followers, Facebook has multiple uses that includes from communication to sharing media, and twitter to catch on the tweets of the famous icons of their respective fields. I also use GroupMe, Hike, Hangouts, Snapchat and WeChat to communicate with friends and share media, most of them have Web Interfaces. Usually I use WhatsApp and Instagram to communicate with friends and family, because I like the interfaces of those two services they offer Web WhatsApp. The real-time chats that I use is WhatsApp, Skype, snapchat, WeChat, GroupMe, Instagram, hangouts and even Facebook. I sometimes stream live on Instagram when I am at an event or if I am traveling somewhere fun, so my followers could see which photos I might post next. Snapchat is the only place where ephemeral content is used but the only reason I even have that application is some of my friend's requested me to have it, in fact the only ephemeral content is the media, conversational chats are usually saved by the either person communicating in a chat to have context if the conversation is interrupted. Facebook marketplace is something that I rely on it is good for getting used items, of course e commerce sites exists too. I do have multiple accounts on Instagram where one account is my personal account and I use the second account I use to follow the famous icons I adore and respect & the reason behind this is that my ratio following to follower, I believe should be in my favor.
